

57°

forecast

THE VIRGINIAN-PILOT

EPILOT SUBSCRIPTIONS ADVERTISING PILOT STORE MORE

SEARCH THE SITE

LOG IN SIGN UP

PilotOnline.com

NEWS OPINION BUSINESS MILITARY SPORTS WEATHER TRAFFIC OBITS

HAMPTONROADS.COM ENTERTAINMENT LIFE MORE

MARKETPLACE
 DEALS SEARCH LOCAL SHOPPING COUPONS

CLASSIFIEDS
 JOBS AUTOS HOMES
 RENTALS LEGALS

HOME » NEWS » CRIME

Local families participate in report on juvenile justice

Posted to: Crime News Virginia Login or register to post comments

By Sarah Hutchins

The Virginian-Pilot
© September 13, 2012

Dozens of Hampton Roads families shared their experiences in the juvenile justice system as part of a critical national report released this week.

Justice for Families, a national alliance of advocacy organizations, authored the report, which included information collected by Families & Allies of Virginia's Youth, said Almeta Harrington of the state group.

Harrington said FAVY used confidential surveys to ask about the experiences of families of youths who have gone through the justice system and adults who did so as children. Harrington said the project questioned 60 to 80 people in Hampton Roads.

The report – released Monday and presented Wednesday to the Virginia Board of Juvenile Justice meeting at the Renaissance Academy in Virginia Beach – was designed to “set the record straight” about the juvenile justice system and its impact.

“In focus groups and surveys, families described how the rapid growth of prison systems, zero-tolerance policies, and aggressive police tactics coupled with the decline of social services and public education have wreaked havoc on their predominantly low-income communities of color,” the report read.

Scarce funding for counseling, harsh punishments, and lack of parental involvement in the judicial process have “set up far too many youth for failure,” according to the report. “In this context, rather than being a deterrent, the juvenile justice system has functioned as a principal feeder into our nation’s vast prison system.”

Parents surveyed for the report said they were confused by court proceedings, and 91 percent of family respondents said they thought courts should involve parents when deciding what happens to children found guilty.

Court fees often forced families to choose between paying them or buying necessities like food, according to the report.

Most study participants said they had trouble visiting their incarcerated children, often because facilities were too far away. Unable to keep in touch, parents said, they often did not have time to make plans for when their children were released.

The report also included a plan for “a family-driven, trauma-informed youth justice system.” Steps included:

- Ending zero-tolerance behavior policies in schools. Such policies lead to students being “arrested, suspended, or expelled due to truancy, roughhousing, and other run-of-the-mill adolescent behavior.”
- Having juvenile courts and corrections agencies outline the rights of families at each stage of the judicial process.
- Closing “inherently abusive and dangerous youth prisons.” Instead, children who need to be confined should be held in “small, community-based facilities” close to home.

- Providing families with peer support and family partners who can help them understand rules surrounding school, arrest, court, probation and placement.

Sarah Hutchins, 757-222-5131, sarah.hutchins@pilotonline.com

Login or register to post comments

COMMENTS ADVISORY: Users are solely responsible for opinions they post here; comments do not reflect the views of The Virginian-Pilot or its websites. Users must follow agreed-upon rules: Be civil, be clean, be on topic; don't attack private individuals, other users or classes of people. Read the full rules here.

- Comments are automatically checked for inappropriate language, but readers might find some comments offensive or inaccurate. If you believe a comment violates our rules, click the report violation link below it.

[+] Show Comments

MORE CRIME STORIES

- Suffolk man guilty of lesser charges in Portsmouth slaying
- State trooper sues driver accused of ramming his car
- Arrest made in June gas station burglary in Suffolk
- Cleared of rapes in '04, man guilty of hurting girlfriend
- Ohio teen in Craigslist trial: I feared for life

MORE NEWS STORIES

- Oh, deer! How to avoid crashing into critters with car
- Norfolk buses headed for Downtown Plaza
- VA's sluggish paycheck pace has vets feeling pinch
- In Va. and N.C., the only good nutria is a dead nutria
- Embattled Portsmouth city manager is out

More articles from: Crime  News

TOOLBOX

 Print

 Email

SAVE & SHARE

 Delicious

 Digg

 Reddit

 Facebook

 Twitter

 Google

 Yahoo

Find.HamptonRoads.com Find. Do. Tag. Share.

what  where  FIND

Popular Searches

Partners
headlineVA.com
 News from around Virginia

featured jobs CareerConnection.com

Campaign Manager
 Norfolk, Virginia Access College Foundation

Physician/Medical Director
 Portsmouth, VA NaphCare

Manager of Rail Vehicle Maintenance
 Norfolk, Virginia Hampton Roads Transit

More jobs

